Leisure & activities

Bratislava is booming. See it for yourself!

The capital city of Slovakia with its 500 thousands inhabitants has become the economical and cultural centre of central Europe.

It's not surprising that the city is regarded as the Beauty of the Danube. More and more tourists are rushing to the picturesque old part of the city, to the traditional bars and cafés and to the typical inns and taverns.

The opera in the famous National Theatre is on a par with that in Vienna and a visit to the famous philharmonic orchestra is virtually a must. In case of free day program, do not miss the Wine Road of Malé Karpaty leads through the former royal boroughs Bratislava, Svätý Jur, Pezinok, and Modra, continuous villages and ends in Trnava.

Sights of the city

However Bratislava belongs to the youngest capital cities of the world, its history range into the ancient period. During past centuries the city has been many times changing the name: from Latin Possonium, through German Pressburg or Hungarian Pozsony to Slovak rustical name form Presporok. This number of names is enough to understand, how many nations lived at this attractive place. From many interesting historical and cultural sights we present the most important ones only.

Bratislava Castle

Dominant of the city to which the first written reference to Bratislava is related in annals of Salzburg of 907. Slavs had built here up a strong fortress that became a significant centre of the Greater Moravian Empire. Reconstruction was carried out as late as in 1953 - 1968. At present, it serves for representation purposes of the Slovak National Council and there are placed collections of the Slovak National Museum in it – expositions of Jewels of ancient past – as well as the Museum of History.

The Old Town Hall

The history of the Old Town Hall dates back to the beginning of the mediaeval town in the 13th century. It was then that the original Romanesque house of Mayor Jakub became the property of the city. Over the course of time Unger's House and Pauer's House were annexed to it.

St. Martin's Cathedral

The three-nave Gothic church was built in the place of the original Romanesque church. There were crowned 11 Hungarian Kings and 8 royal wives. Beethoven's Missa Solemnis was played for the first time in this church.

Primatial Palace

The Primatial Palace (1778-1781) was built on property originally belonging to the archbishop of Esztergom. The façade of the palace is in strictly classical style. The Treat of Bratislava between France and Austria was signed in the palace's Hall of Mirrors on 26 December, 1805. Today the palace is the office of the mayor of Bratislava, and the superb Hall of Mirrors is now used to host concerts.

Michael's Gate

The bulbous yet elegant copper roof of Michael's Gate is one of the symbols of Bratislava. The 51 meters long tower has seven floors, and the superb view of the old town from the upper terrace of the tower is one of Bratislava's top visitor experiences.

Grassalkovich Palace & Garden

This rococo summer palace was built in 1760 for the chairman of the Hungarian Royal Chamber and advisor to Empress Maria Theresa, Count Anton Grassalkovich. The palace is now the official residence of the President of the Slovak Republic. Behind the Presidential Palace (Grassalkovich Palace) on Hodžovo Square is a handsome park (originally the gardens of the palace) with old trees and lawns.

Slovak National Theatre

The building was constructed within 1884 – 1886 on the basis of designs of Viennese architects F. Fellner and H. Helmer in place of the original theatre of estates. Since 1920, it is domicile of the Slovak National Theatre and Ballet.

Devín Castle

Mighty fortress above the confluence of the rivers Morava and Danube is one of the most significant archaeological sites in Slovakia. The oldest traces of settlement date back to 5000 BC. The first written reference comes from 864. The castle is a national monument of cultural legacy belonging to the Municipal Museum at present.

City Curiosities

During the city tour you find out many curiosities that you will laugh about on one hand and on the other hand you will discover some interesting information about the city past.

Čumil/ Rubberneck

A unique Bratislava curiosity: no other city in the world has a statue emerging from a manhole. After Rubberneck had lost his head twice due to careless drivers, city councilors decided to help him by erecting a road sign to warn drivers.

Cardinal's hat

On the top of the tympanum is the coat of arms of Cardinal Jozef Batthyányi, the first occupant of the palace; an iron model of his hat, weighing 150 kg, crowns the building.

Schöner Náci

This statue commemorates a unique figure in Bratislava's history. Not a statesman, a sportsman or soldier: instead, the Schöner Náci, whose real name was Ignác Lamár, is remembered for being one of Bratislava's social institutions. Born in 1897, he was famous for wandering the streets of the city, elegant in morning suit and top hat. He would frequently doff his hat to the ladies he passed and offer them flowers or a song.

Napoleon's Soldier

One of Bratislava's most popular photo opportunities is this bronze statue of a Napoleonic soldier leaning over a bench in the old town square Hlavné námestie (Main Square).

Paparazzi

Passers-by in Bratislava old town are drawn to this life-sized statue of a paparazzo celebrity photographer. Peering around a corner into Laurinská Street and holding a camera in his hands, he seems to be in the process of photographing some member of Bratislava's high society emerging from the eponymous bar next door.

Taunter

There are various explanations for this strange carving of a small, apparently naked man set into the façade of a house. One of them says it was intended to ridicule the curious owner of an adjacent house who used to spy on passers-by on the street through a small oriel window.

Sightseeing tour by Oldtimer train Prešporáčik

Prešporáčik (a play on the old Slovak name for the city, Prešporok) is a 'mini train' providing city sightseeing tours through the otherwise traffic-free historic streets of the old town. Some tours also include the castle. The service runs daily, usually from 9.30 am to 5 pm, according to demand.

The New Bridge

Constructed between 1967 and 1972 across the Danube River, the New Bridge – also known as the SNP Bridge, after the Slovak National Uprising – is perhaps the city's most distinctive structure. Its designers, J. Lacko and A. Tesar, decided to suspend the steel deck of the bridge from a single pylon. On the top of the pylon, at a height of 80 metres, is a restaurant connected to the bridge itself via an inclined high-speed lift housed within one of the pylon's columns, as well as via an emergency staircase with 430 steps inside the other column. The bridge is 431.8m long and 21m wide. The total mass of the steel structure, including the pylon, is 7,537 tons.

Sports & leisure activities

Bratislava is not only the cultural, but also sport capital of Slovakia. Bratislava boasts numerous theatres, museums, galleries, concert halls, cinemas, film clubs, and foreign cultural institutions.

It also has the country's biggest football and ice hockey teams, a purpose-built white-water rafting centre on the Danube, and numerous walking and cycling trails in or near the city.

High-quality spa and relaxation facilities, increasingly popular throughout Slovakia, are easily accessible.

Biking

Bratislava's busiest cycle paths (shared with inline-skaters and walkers) are near the Danube. A good south-bank ride goes from under the city's Old Bridge out to the spectacular Danubiana Meulensteen Art Museum near Čunovo (about 20 km one-way). It's entirely traffic free (apart from the access road to the museum) and in summer there are bars and restaurants along the path. If your time is right, you can catch a riverboat back to the city from Danubiana. Alternatively, the riverside path continues – after the dam at Gabčíkovo on the north bank – along the Danube as far as the town of Štúrovo (168 km).

Hiking

Bratislava's location on the slopes of the Small Carpathian hills mean there is a wide range of hiking opportunities within the city itself and in the surrounding area. Forested hill sides comprise almost one quarter of the city's area, so getting away from the traffic and bustle of the metropolis – even for just a short time – is easy.

Rafting

The water sports centre in Čunovo, only 20 kilometres from Bratislava city centre, offers visitors the chance to experience a variety of adrenaline water sports, from canoeing to rafting. The purpose-built centre has skilled instructors and 5 different runs with variable difficulty. There is also a hotel with cafe-restaurant on site.

Dining & Nightlife

Bratislava's city centre has sometimes been referred to as "one huge restaurant". This is more or less true: you can find a restaurant, café, bar or pub on just about every corner. There are hundreds in the old-town pedestrian zone itself. The people of Bratislava enjoy spending time socializing in them, and we await with anticipation the appearance of outdoor seating in May each year, which allows us (and visitors) to sit in the sunshine, sipping wines from local wine yards and admiring the beauty of the women of Bratislava as they pass by.

Performing Arts

Bratislava has a strong tradition of drama, though most performances are in Slovak so will not be immediately accessible to English-speaking audiences. However, English-language movies are normally shown in the original language, and there are several cinemas in or close to the centre. Bratislava was always the centre of culture. In Presburg lived and played so famous people like Mozart, Beethoven, Haydn či List.

There are more than 20 museums and 80 galleries, a lot of events and performances during the year.

Shopping

The shopping scene in Bratislava has improved out of all recognition in the last few years. Not only do many stores have long opening hours, with the big malls open at weekends as well as during holidays, but the range of products now on offer – from global brands to local specialties – is commensurate with the city's size and status.

POLUS CITY CENTER

The modern shopping centre, is about 20 minutes away by tram. A Lot of fashion boutiques, restaurants, cafeterias.

AUPARK
