LA BOBADILLA

A ROYAL HIDEAWAY HOTEL

An unparalleled natural setting in Granada's Sierra de Loja, where time stands still to experience and enjoy Andalusia.

More than 25 years ago, Dr Egli, a successful Swiss businessman and lawyer, imagined an idyllic place where he could make his dream of living in the heart of Andalusia a reality.

Thus, this magnificent 350-hectare complex was created, surrounded by the sweeping ilex and oak forests and olive and almond groves between Malaga and Granada. A prime location where you can drift to sleep lulled by the sounds of nature and wake to birds' songs.

Here you can feel the spirit of Andalusian poets and of the calm, pleasant lifestyle...that's how La Bobadilla began. This is a place to share with friends. To enjoy life.

A high-angle, close-up photograph of a gourmet dish presented on a large, round plate with a repeating hexagonal or honeycomb pattern. The dish features a large, white, rectangular element, possibly a piece of foie gras or a terrine, with a dark, textured crust on one side. It is surrounded by several smaller, round, light-colored components, likely dumplings or small cakes, garnished with delicate green herbs and small dark pieces. The entire dish is set against a soft, warm-toned background. The word "Gastronomy" is overlaid in a clean, white, sans-serif font across the center of the image.

Eco hotel

In addition to its commitment to hospitality excellence, Hotel La Bobadilla, a Royal Hideaway Hotel incorporates a philosophy of total respect for its surroundings, utilising biomass from olive stones as an energy source for heat and hot water.

Biomass constitutes one of the most environmentally-friendly energy sources, as it is non-polluting.

Of all the renewable energies, the olive stone is a resource with tremendous potential for growth because it leaves very little waste: burning one tonne of olive stones generates 100 grams of ash, which is later used as fertiliser for plants.

Sport, nature and sustainability are very closely tied with the “Bobadilla – Eco” concept. La Bobadilla takes ownership and is committed to the environment, offering our guests outdoor activities and sports in harmony with nature and sustainable development.
